

We're pleased to note that there are pilot libraries this year that are eager to welcome you for more local "Lest We Forget" workshops. They are located in Winnipeg, Manitoba

The press release announcing this year's "Lest We Forget" project is available here: <http://www.collectionscanada.gc.ca/whats-new/013-494-e.html>

HELP THE PROJECT AND PERHAPS BOOK A WORKSHOP TODAY:

The libraries would be interested in knowing which schools have participated in the past and what research has been completed on your local cenotaph or honour rolls in your cities and schools. They are also interested in booking students for workshops at the library itself this semester and next. Some of you have done quite extensive work in your research of the First and Second World War fallen from your local areas and the libraries would like to complement your work and learn from your experience.

The library in your area has received 50 digitized military service records of men and women from your city. These may or may not be the same people you have researched. To save reinventing the wheel, if you could self-identify to the appropriate librarian below, that would help them enormously in getting started in the Lest We Forget Project.

They may wish to contact you about the research already done by your class, enlist your assistance and/or invite you to participate in a new onsite workshop.

If you would like to arrange a workshop with any of the libraries below, by all means let them know and they will be happy to discuss options with you.

Winnipeg Public Library (Winnipeg, MB) Louis-Philippe Bujold Local History Librarian, 251 Donald Street Winnipeg, Manitoba R3C 3P5 (204) 986-4183 LBujold@winnipeg.ca

Thank you for your collaboration in helping keep the memories alive of those who have gone before us.

As a note, Debbie Jiang is currently on maternity leave. In her absence don't hesitate to let me know if you have any questions.

Best Regards,

Kyle Browness
